Leaves, cats and booze: Emergency manager changes ordinances regarding these 3 plus 39 other things

By LOUISE WREGE

BENTON HARBOR — Leaves may no longer be raked into a street, alley or gutter.

Cats are not allowed to run at large beyond the owner's property line.

And drinking alcohol is no longer permitted outdoors on private property that is open to the public.

These are just three of the ordinance changes made Oct. 18 by Benton Harbor Emergency Manager Tony Saunders.

A small legal notice was published in Saturday's legal advertisements in The Herald-Palladium.

In all, Saunders amended or repealed 42 sections of the city's ordinances.

A full copy of the changes is available in the city clerk's office, 200 E. Wall St.

Leaf rules

The new leaf pickup rules require homeowners to put leaves and yard waste in paper bags or containers labeled "Lawn Waste." Plastic bags, even if they are labeled "biodegradable," are Power grab?

County Administrator Wolf says that's not the case with his new budgetary power over courts

BERRIEN CENTER — What is normally a routine approval of the upcoming year's county budgets turned into a disagreement over the powers of the county administrator at Thursday night's Berrien County Board meeting.

Commissioners voted on the budget separately from other routine business and ended up approving it on a split vote.

Commissioners Jeanette Leahey and Catherine Thieneman took issue with a sentence in the budget resolution giving County Administrator William Wolf budgetary power over vacant court positions, but in the end they did not prevail.

The budget with the resolution language giving Wolf the added power was approved on a 8-2 vote, with Leahey and Thieneman dissenting. Board Chairman Jon Hinkelman and Vice Chairwoman Marletta Seats were absent. Voting to approve the 2014 budgets were Neal Nitz, who served as chairman of the meeting, and Jim Curran, McKinley Elliott, John Klimek, Debra Panozzo, Andy Vavra, Robert Wooley and Mamie Yarbrough.

The sticking point for Leahey and Thieneman was language in the budget resolution giving Wolf the power to remove funding from vacant court positions in addition to the power he already has to eliminate funding for such positions in other coun-

The game introduced fans to the promise of a fairly newfangled concept known as the forward pass.

The game that changed football

Marking 100 years since ND-Army showdown

SOUTH BEND — The birth of Notre Dame as a football powerhouse and the possibility of the pass as an offensive weapon came together on a cold, raw day in West Point a century ago before a crowd of 5,000 mostly Army fans.

The start of World War I was months away and commercial radio broadcasts were still several years away when the team from South Bend boarded a train for what would become a momentous game. Like much in Notre Dame's past, the game played Nov. 1, 1913, has become a mix of history and myth, helped by the movie "Knute Rockne All-American." Starring Ronald Reagan, the movie made it appear as though Rockne and Notre Dame quarterback Gus Dorais invented the forward pass.

The game did have Rockne as a star receiver and Dwight Eisenhower was a reserve in a game scheduled less than 10 months earlier when Notre Dame was looking for quality games because of a boycott by Midwestern teams.

Patients, firms shop for better health care deals

By TOM MURPHY
AP Business Writer

Paul Freeman drove 600 miles last year to save himself — and his employer — thousands of dollars on his surgery.

Freeman's insurer covered his travel costs and the entire bill because a medical center in Oklahoma City could remove the loose cartilage in his knee for about 70 percent less than a hospital closer to Freeman's Texhoma, Okla., home.

At first, the community bank CEO hesitated because he thought the lower price would mean lower quality. But he knew if he didn't make the roughly 10-hour roundtrip trek, he'd pay about $5,000 out of pocket.

"You immediately think, 'Oh they're going to take me into a butcher shop and it's going to be real scary,"' Freeman, 53, says, noting that instead he had a "wonderful experience."

People shop for deals on everything from cars to clothes to computers. Why not for health care, too?

Insurers, employers and individuals are shopping around for health care as they try to tame rising health care costs. Companies are doing things like paying for workers to travel if they agree to have a surgery performed in another city where the cost is cheaper. They're also providing online tools to help people search for better deals in their home market.

And some patients are bargain-hunting on their own. Through a website called MediBid, people who pay out of pocket are soliciting doctors, hospitals and medical centers ty departments.

"County department heads have always worked with the county administrator," Leahey said. "If this is included, it creates an adversarial relationship. People should work together collaboratively. Do you honestly believe you would have to go this far and that people would not cooperate?"

Thieneman's concern was that the new language in the resolution gives Wolf authority over elected officials. "This is condescending towards them," she said.

Elliott, who is a lawyer, gave an historical perspective on the county administrator's authority and said that it is not a new grant of power or authority. Nitz noted that the county administrator already has the authority to take such actions with all departments except the courts. He said the added language in the resolution extends that authority to the courts.

Wolf said he had already explained the new language with court officials.

"This is not a power grab but a fairness issue," he said. "If we have an unexpected huge expenditure, I can enforce now across the board except for the courts. The court has statutory authority to spend their budget, and I want to have authority over them if necessary. I hope we never have to use it.

"I ask that you give me the tools when things are no longer routine," Wolf said

Approves budgets

The County Board approved a 2014 general fund budget of $54.8 million and a special revenue funds budget of $72.7 million. A public hearing on the budgets was held Oct. 17.

The general fund budget, which covers the cost of many basic county government services, increased $2.9 million, or 5.5 percent, over the 2013 budget of $52 million. Property taxes – anticipated to bring in $34.21 million – provide the single-largest source of money for the general fund.

The general fund is the county's primary operating fund, providing money for the courts, prosecutor's office, sheriff and jail, clerk treasurer, register of deeds, drain commissioner and animal control.

The special revenue funds budget covers spending and revenue sources that are committed for a special purpose or otherwise restricted, such as the child care fund, public transportation and special property tax millages for senior citizen center operations, the 911 emergency telephone system and certain public safety functions.

Because much of the special funds budget comes from grants, the revenue and spending totals can fluctuate substantially from year to year. The special revenue funds budget of $72.7 million for 2014 compares with the $62.8 million in 2013.

A story in the Oct. 18 Herald-Palladium put the 2014 figure at $42.3 million, but several funds were omitted, including capital projects, the enterprise fund and internal service funds.

Tax spread

The County Board approved the property tax spread for 2013, which shows millages requested to be levied by the county, cities, townships, school districts and all other taxing units.

The tax spread, prepared by the county Equalization Department, shows the county's general tax rate at 4.7723 mills; the 911 emergency telephone system at 0.45 mill; senior citizens center operations, 0.3 mill; law enforcement, .35 mill; and parks, .10 mill.

The entire tax spread report can be reviewed at the county's website, www.berriencounty.org, under tax equalization.

A separate report shows the tax millage levies by school district.

Army had a hole in its schedule after Yale canceled a game in a dispute over eligibility rules.

There were new rules about the forward pass, made legal seven years earlier as a result of President Theodore Roosevelt urging college presidents to make changes because of deaths caused by football violence.

and cry in the country that this has to stop," said Frank Maggio, author of "Notre Dame and the Game That Changed Football. "The forward pass was designed to take out some of the brutality."

But schools weren't quick to adopt the pass because rules called for the opposing team to get the ball if the pass fell incomplete. There were also rules against a pass of longer than 20 yards and passes hind the line of scrimmage and teams couldn't pass past the goal-line.

"So the rules weren't very conducive to passing," said Kent Stephens, historian at the College Football Hall of Fame.

The rules were adjusted over the next several years because of the number of deaths from football continued. By 1912, passes longer than 40 yards were legal and the rule making incomplete passes a turnover were eliminated.

That came just before Jesse Harper, a 29-year-old coach at Wabash who had played under Amos Alonzo Stagg at the University of Chicago, was hired as Notre Dame's first full-time athletic director at the end of 1912.

Notre Dame at the time was having trouble finding competitive teams to play. The 1912 schedule included wins of 116-7 over St. Viator, 74-7 against Adrian and 69-0 over Marquette. The priests at Notre Dame turned to Harper to put together a more challenging schedule.

Notre Dame had previously played members of what is now known as the Big Ten, but the conference members refused to let Notre Dame join in 1908 and boycotted playing the school in part because of anti-Catholic sentiments and in part because member schools didn't think Notre Dame had high enough academic standards, said Murray Sperber, a visiting professor at the University of California, Berkeley, who wrote "Shake Down the Thunder," a history of Notre Dame football.

Michigan, which had left the conference, was willing to play Notre Dame until the team from South Bend upset the Wolverines 11-3 in 1909. Michigan canceled the 1910 game because Wolverines coach Fielding Yost accused Notre Dame of using two ineligible players.

Harper decided to seek games against national schools. He wrote a letter to Army and also scheduled games against Penn State and Texas. Army initially offered to pay Notre Dame $400 for the game, but Harper held out for $1,000.

The team that later became known as the Fighting Irish wasn't recognized as a power by people along the East Coast, Stephens said. A story in The New York Times read: "The Army hopes to defeat Notre Dame by a decisive score to-morrow and thus secure confidence to themselves and their supporters."

It didn't turn out to be a confidence-building game, at least not for the Cadets. Gus Dorais surprised Army by completing 14 of 17 passes for 243 yards and two touchdowns, with Rockne and other Notre Dame receivers catching the ball on the run.

Orr: Bankruptcy filing not condition of job

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit's emergency manager testified Friday that he did not promise to seek bankruptcy protection for the city as a condition of getting the job.

Kevyn Orr's testimony came on the third day of a trial to determine whether the city is eligible to fix its finances in bankruptcy court.

Detroit must show it is broke and tried in good faith to negotiate with creditors. Unions and pension funds with much money at stake claim the city didn't hold genuine talks and therefore the case should be thrown out. Attorneys for those groups have tried to build a case that bankruptcy was a predetermined course or inevitable outcome.

Orr, who was appointed emergency manager in March, decided in July to make Detroit the largest municipality to file for bankruptcy. After taking the job, he saw firsthand the high crime, blight and deplorable conditions of police equipment and facilities, he said Friday.

"Basically everything that I had read was substantiated in very stark relief," Orr said.

Orr, a bankruptcy expert who represented automaker Chrysler LLC during its successful restructuring, has said the city is saddled with $18 billion in long-term debt. He and Police Chief James Craig both testified on the trial's third day about the city's dire straits.

Orr will return to the trial on Monday, where he's expected to be grilled by attorneys representing groups who oppose bankruptcy.

Craig, who started his job in the same month Detroit filed for bankruptcy, began his career in Detroit but worked 28 years for the Los Angeles Police Department. He has worked for or led several law enforcement agencies across the country.

He said department morale is lower than anywhere else he's worked, including his stint as a police officer in Detroit in the 1970s. Among other things, he said, officers blame pay cuts and 12-hour shifts.

Gobles-area man arrested in Indiana

PAW PAW — The long arm of the law this week reached into Indiana and nabbed a Gobles-area man who allegedly fled Michigan to avoid arrest on warrants.

Carl Lee Dobbins, 30, was arrested Thursday morning in Marion, Ind., by police there on Michigan arrest warrants and brought back to Michigan to be arraigned in Seventh District Court in Paw Paw, Van Buren County Sheriff's Sgt. David Walker said.

Dobbins was wanted for violating Michigan sex offender registration requirements, a felony; for failing to pay fines and costs related to a sex offender registry violation; and for failing to pay fines and costs on a Kalamazoo traffic violation.

Dobbins was initially put in the Marion, Ind., jail, and then members of the Michigan State Police Extradition Team went there and brought him back to Van Buren County.

Outages hit Shoreham Drive area, SJ High

By JULIE SWIDWA
HP Staff Writer

ST. JOSEPH — Two power outages left people in the dark for several hours in the Shoreham Drive area and sent St. Joseph High School students home for most of the morning on Friday.

Indiana Michigan Power spokeswoman Erica Putt said 660 customers were without power from 11:41 p.m. Thursday to 4:25 a.m. Friday in an area south of Shoreham Drive after tree branches got into a power line, causing a transformer to spark.

The power went out at St. Joseph High School at 6:07 a.m. due to equipment failure and was restored at 9:25 a.m., Putt said.

Christine Waterhouse, director of communications for St. Joseph Public Schools, said students were sent home about 8:30 a.m. after school officials contacted the utility company for an estimated restoration time. She said school officials were told the power was expected to be restored by about 10 a.m., so students were sent home and instructed to return to school at 11 a.m.

Waterhouse said students who ride the bus were bused home and back to school while students who walk or drive themselves to school used those forms of transportation.

"A message was immediately sent out to parents via email and phone and was also posted on Facebook, the school website and on the radio," Waterhouse said in the written statement from the school district.

She said lunch and the rest of the day went on as normal, with students attending fourth, fifth and sixth periods.

Waterhouse said the students and parents were cooperative and understanding, and I&M was quick to respond to the situation.

South Haven

Pigeons Highway?

By HP STAFF

SOUTH HAVEN — Southbound I-196, between Phoenix Road and M-140, was closed for two hours Friday morning after a delivery truck full of pigeons crashed and turned over near the M-43 overpass.

The driver of the truck, whose name was not released, was taken by ambulance to South Haven Health System with minor injuries, according to a South Haven Police Department spokesperson. Information was not available Friday afternoon as to how the accident occurred.

Before they could reopen the highway, rescue workers had to right the delivery truck and transfer the pigeons to another truck.

Traffic was diverted to Blue Star Highway while southbound I-196 remained closed until 11:30 a.m.

Hurt while helping cat

By BECKY KARK
HP South Haven Bureau

SOUTH HAVEN — Police said it is believed a young woman may have stopped her car and gotten out to help a cat that may have been in the road when she was hit by another vehicle and seriously injured Thursday evening.

The other vehicle drove off.

Rachel Krieger, 21, of Allegan County's Lee Township was traveling north on 60th Street, north of 106th Avenue in Casco Township, when she apparently stopped her vehicle to help a cat that was in the road. The vehicle that struck her was described as a 1988-89 Chevrolet GM pickup truck or Suburban-type of vehicle, according to Lt. Frank Baker of the Allegan County Sheriff's Department.

Krieger was found injured in the roadway by another person, who reported the accident at 10:36 p.m. and stayed with her while waiting for rescue workers and Allegan County Sheriff's deputies to arrive. Krieger was taken to Bronson Methodist Hospital in Kalamazoo.

When she was found, her vehicle was still running and the driver's-side door was ajar. Deputies found a cat that was wet on the front driver's seat, police said. Krieger's mother told police that the family does not have a cat.

The vehicle that hit Krieger will likely have damage to the front end of the driver's side and will be missing a headlight and turn-signal assembly, the police news release said.

Anyone with information related to the crash is asked to contact the Allegan County Sheriff's Office Detective Bureau at 616-673-0500 or Silent Observer. If area residents were in the area and noticed either the victim's or suspect's vehicle, they are asked to contact police. Additionally, if anyone had been in contact with Krieger around the time of the crash, detectives would like to speak with them.

Man rejects Wal-Mart's offer to return to work

HARTLAND TOWNSHIP, Mich. (AP) — A man who was fired by a Wal-Mart store in Michigan after interrupting an assault in the parking lot said Friday he would reject the offer to return to work.

Kristopher Oswald, 30, said he believes public attention has embarrassed Wal-Mart and that the Bentonville, Ark.-based company would look for reasons to fire him again, although a spokeswoman said there would be no retaliation.

"I wholeheartedly believe I'm being set up for the fall," Oswald told The Associated Press. "I believe the only reason I was offered my job back in the first place was that I was on TV. They got three days of bad publicity, people going in and protesting, saying they wouldn't shop there anymore."

On Thursday, he told the Livingston County Daily Press & Argus he wanted a formal apology and the firing for violating store policy be removed from his personnel record.

Wal-Mart spokeswoman Brooke Buchanan told the AP that Wal-Mart had apologized and had a strict policy against retaliation. She said there would be no mention of the dismissal in Oswald's file.

"The offer's on the table," she said. "If he wants to come back to Wal-Mart, we will assure he will not be retaliated against and we will provide safe working conditions for him."

She said the company also had offered to reimburse Oswald for lost wages.

Oswald has said he was on his break at the store in Hartland Township northwest of Detroit about 2:30 a.m. Oct. 13 when he saw a man grabbing a woman, who screamed for help. He said he intervened but the man attacked and threatened to kill him. Oswald said he was able to get on top of the man, but two others jumped him from behind.

The Daily Press & Argus reported the woman's assailant was a former boyfriend, who has been charged with domestic violence, drunken driving and malicious destruction of property.

to bid to perform knee surgeries and other non-emergency procedures.

Patients who shop for care represent a tiny slice of the roughly $2.7 trillion spent annually on health care in the U.S., said Devon Herrick, an economist who studies health care for the National Center for Policy Analysis. But he and other experts expect this trend to grow, especially as more companies offer insurance plans that require employees to pay thousands of dollars before most coverage starts. These so-called high-deductible plans also will be among the cheapest options available on the public exchanges set up as part of the health care overhaul to enable millions of uninsured people to shop for coverage.

Advocates say all the shopping will help control medical spending.

"We waste an enormous amount of money in this country by overpaying for health care," says John Goodman, an economist and CEO of the National Center for Policy Analysis. "The only way to get rid of waste is to have people compete in a real marketplace."

Searching for health care deals is a big change for many patients who're used to paying whatever their insurer didn't. Just figuring out an appropriate price for a procedure can be difficult for the average person.

Surgeries and other major procedures have different prices based on a variety of factors, including whether it's performed in a big city where care can cost more or in a hospital. And the portion that patients pay can vary widely. A lot depends on the type of insurance coverage and other factors like the leverage a provider has in negotiating rates.

For instance, a patient in Detroit with high-deductible health coverage provided by an employer could pay $920 or $2,791 out of pocket for a colonoscopy, according to research done by health care technology firm Castlight Health. Same patient. Same insurance coverage. Only difference: Where the procedure is performed.

"You can be a highly educated consumer now and still not understand what bill is going to hit you," says Dr. Giovanni Colella, CEO of Castlight, which designs an application that insurers or employers can give to patients to help them shop for health care based on price and quality.

It's also tough for patients to measure quality versus price. "You may find something (more expensive), but it doesn't mean it's better, safer, or more efficient," says Arthur Caplan, a medical ethicist at NYU Langone Medical Center.

Insurers and employers are encouraging workers to become more educated. They say quality is a priority when they ask patients if they want a better deal.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the largest private U.S. employer, provides health coverage for 1.1 million employees and their dependents. It runs a voluntary Centers of Excellence program that sends people to one of six hospital systems around the U.S. for certain heart, spine and transplant surgeries at no cost to the patient.

Wal-Mart spokesman Randy Hargrove says the program can save a patient between $5,000 and $10,000 in out-of-pocket costs, depending on their coverage.

Halloween parties for grown-ups

By MELISSA RAYWORTH
Associated Press

Halloween, the holiday built around the twin pleasures of playing dress-up and eating too much candy, is obviously a hit with children.

But send invitations to your grown-up friends and you'll probably find they haven't outgrown the urge to don creepy costumes and celebrate in spooky, theatrical style.

Want to host a party that merges Halloween fun with grown-up sophistication? Turning your home into a haunted mansion is surprisingly easy, says interior designer Brian Patrick Flynn, founder of Flynnside Out Productions.

Just ditch the cheerful orange pumpkins and smiling ghosts for darker, more creative dicor.

"Stay away from anything cute," Flynn says, "and instead opt for creepy-chic."

Here Flynn and two other design experts – Jon Call of Mr. Call Designs and the latest "HGTV Star" winner, Tiffany Brooks – offer decorating advice for a memorable, stylish and affordable Halloween party.

Natural fabrics

Cheesecloth evokes ancient mummies, while burlap brings to mind scarecrows. Both fabrics are inexpensive and lightweight, but sturdy – perfect for Halloween party tablecloths.

These solid-color pieces also have a more adult feel than the whimsical prints on Halloween tablecloths or napkins designed for kids.

Call likes using large sheets of brown craft paper on buffet tables or as a runner down the center of a Halloween dining table. Cluster small gourds (the darker and more oddly shaped, the better) along the runner, he says, then add a few large pillar candles.

Easily and inexpensively, "you've knocked out a table that's great for any fall holiday," Call says. And cleanup is simple: "After a party, throw the paper out."

Flynn says you can make your home's entryway extra creepy by soaking large pieces of cheesecloth in tea, then shredding the cloth once it's dry. Hang the pieces from the ceiling above your porch or drape it from walls with a few well-placed nails to conjure up the feel of a haunted house.

Dark and dangerous colors

All three designers suggest using a muted palette of grays, browns and black. Brooks suggests spray-painting pumpkins glossy gray to create a glamorous centerpiece.

Use orange only as an accent, Flynn says, perhaps adding a few orange napkins to an otherwise black and gray table setting.

You can also create a dramatic scene by spray-painting empty wine bottles in a matte black, he says, then replacing the labels with your own creations: Using scrapbooking labels or cardstock and a Sharpie, come up with creepy names for the liquids supposedly in the bottles.

Flynn also suggests buying inexpensive wooden birdhouses or cheap Christmas village houses, then spraying them with dark gray or black paint to create a mini-ghost town for display on your buffet table or bar.

Weird walls

Take down any cheerful artwork and replace it with old portraits from thrift shops or flea markets. Halloween stores sell deliberately creepy portraits made for this purpose, but it's more fun to hunt down real paintings, says Flynn.

Brooks agrees that this easy decorating move can transform the feel of a room, especially if the room will be lit only by candles. (She plans to shut off her electricity entirely during a Halloween party this year, filling each room with just enough black pillar candles to provide dim, flickering light.)

Once you've hung your new gallery of portraits, Flynn suggests taping tiny pieces of black construction paper over the eyeballs in the pictures for a haunted mansion feel.

Serious things

Flynn also recommends trolling thrift shops and flea markets for items that evoke dusty, dated Victorian style, or midcentury pieces that seem lifted from a '60s Hitchcock movie.

Fill old apothecary jars and other glass containers with water tinted with yellow and green food coloring to suggest formaldehyde. Then drop anything – tiny plastic animals, seed pods, bits of moss – into the colorful liquid. Or create terrariums by filling glass vases with twigs, moss, and tiny plastic bugs and snakes.

Seek out second-hand treasures: real or fake taxidermy, stone bust bookends, antique dolls and toys, and vintage books and laboratory or surgical equipment.

If you're lucky, you might even come across some old mannequin heads. What was once a wig display can serve as an eye-popping Halloween centerpiece.

Other inexpensive additions to your party space: Fill vases with bare branches spray-painted black, tying a few small bats from a craft store to the limbs.

Flynn also suggests slipping belts around the backs of chairs to suggest that dinner guests may not escape the table easily.

And Brooks recommends using a hodgepodge of mismatched and even scratched dishes from thrift shops (cleaned well, of course) to give your table an off-kilter, haunted house feel.

ABOVE: A haunted-house entryway, with ripped pieces of cheesecloth that were soaked in weak tea, created by designer Brian Patrick Flynn for HGTV.com. Once dried, pieces can be draped from staples or small nails. LEFT: Designer Brian Patrick Flynn soaked the labels off empty bottles and spray-painted them black. He then used scrapbook labels to add new names ("Eye of Newt," "Deadly Nightshade"), and then clustered them together.

Transplant trees, shrubs in fall for best results

Joe Lamp'l
The Gardener Within

When is the best time to plant or transplant trees and shrubs? Although these can be planted any time the ground isn't frozen, the absolute best time is fall. The cool air and warm soil temperatures are the perfect combination for establishing roots in a new environment.

Imagine for a moment that you are a plant or tree being relocated. Most of your roots were severed when you were dug up, and now you have to find a way to provide water and nutrients to all your parts, even though you've lost most of what you need to make that happen. Now imagine it's summer. The sun is beating down on your leaves, there's no rain in sight, yet the normal environmental conditions call for you to grow, grow, grow. It's like being told to run a marathon in July while you're battling a terrible flu.

But what if you were provided cool temperatures, just the right hydration and all the nutrients to endure the 26-mile race? Your chances would be much better, right?

The cooler air is kind to plants and trees, especially those that have just lost a major portion of their roots during digging. In addition, soil temperatures are still warm, creating an excellent environment for new root growth.

Perhaps the greatest benefit to fall transplanting is that many plants and trees are entering a period of dormancy. Energy normally required to sustain existing foliage and produce more can instead go into root development and storing nutrients and resources during the cool months. By the spring, when demand for new growth above ground starts again, the root system should be well established so the plant can handle the upcoming demands of summer.

Here are a few additional tips to ensure the success of all your fall transplants.

▶ When transplanting, advance work can make the difference between those trees and shrubs just surviving and thriving. Make the planting hole two to three times wider than the current root ball, but no deeper than the plant was growing in its previous environment.

If you're planting a container-grown plant, don't assume that the soil level in the container indicates the proper depth for planting. Many times growers add more soil to the container, ultimately putting too much above the root level. At planting time, scratch away the soil to find where the roots really start. That's the proper level for planting in the ground.

It is better to plant a tree or shrub slightly high and allow the area to drain than for a plant or tree to sit in a bowl and collect excess water. Newly disturbed soil has a tendency to settle and plants growing below grade can easily succumb to root rot or disease.

▶ When backfilling, return the existing soil to the planting hole around the roots, without amending the soil. The latest research indicates that roots growing in amended soil rarely venture into the harder native soil. For best long-term establishment, don't spoil your roots. Instead, break up the existing soil, remove the rocks and backfill.

▶ A critical step at this stage is to water well. Not only does it provide needed moisture but also the water helps eliminate air pockets that could otherwise result in dead roots.

The final step is to mulch with three to four inches of organic matter, such as shredded leaves, ground bark or straw. Mulch helps soil retain its moisture and moderate its temperature. Winter can bring dry conditions, so water if needed. Roots are still growing and soil moisture is essential.

Many people to thank for Moving Wall display

Editor,

On the weekend of Aug. 22-26, Randall Couchman American Legion Post 204 had the privilege of sponsoring The Moving Wall – a half-size replica of the Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C. Our mission was to present The Wall with honor and dignity.

By all accounts our mission was a success. To our Legion family, Legionaires, Sons of the American Legion and the Ladies Auxiliary – a heart-filled thanks to all who supported this endeavor. We are truly an organization of veterans serving veterans.

To the Village of Three Oaks, area businesses, the Pokagon Fund, riders, and friends and family who volunteered their time, talents, property and money to make this event so meaningful – words cannot adequately express the gratitude felt by this committee. You honor us by your devotion and support.

To all who came to pay their respect to our brothers and sisters who gave the ultimate sacrifice – a special thank you. It was, and always will be, a "moving" experience. Welcome home and God Bless America!

Thousands enjoyed annual arts and craft show

Editor,

The annual Chapel Hill Arts/Craft Show was a grand success this year. We want to take a minute and thank the shoppers, exhibitors, volunteers and fairground personnel for another great Arts & Crafts show!

We enjoyed summer-like weather with an amazing crowd. Approximately 7,500 people were on the Berrien County Youth Fairgrounds on Oct. 5, and the Sheriff's Posse did a great job of parking all those vehicles. We especially want to especially thank Deb Haight, Shirley Gast and The Herald-Palladium for the coverage they gave to the show through the article and ads. The profits from our show will help many individual programs here in Berrien County, along with national and worldwide projects.

Anyone who had a part in this show will be changing someone's life. Once the programs and projects for 2013 have been determined, they will be listed in our website. Visit us there at www.chapelhill-craftshow.org. Also, a listing of this year's exhibitors can be found on our site, with their contact information. It's not too early to mark your calendars now for the 35th Annual Chapel Hill Arts & Crafts Show, Oct. 4, 2014.

See you there!

Garey does his best for SJ city residents

Editor,

With the upcoming St. Joseph City Commission election, I thought it was important for the voters to have an understanding of the kind of commissioner they have in Mike Garey.

Some time ago I mentioned to Mike a circumstance that I noticed near my home that I thought was improper action on the part of a business. Understand that my comment was no more than just that, not a complaint. Within days the situation was corrected.

This is the kind of city commissioner you will have when you re-elect Mike Garey. He is conscientious, dedicated, informed and quick to take action when needed.

Mike Garey has been a lifelong resident of St. Joseph, he has raised his children here and he has his business here; he cares about our city and the residents. Mike has been on the St. Joseph City Commission for 14 years and every day he works to do what is best for the citizens of our city.

I hope you join me in voting for Mike Garey on Nov. 5.

Iran's clever gambit

The high-profile Iranian nuclear peace offensive launched with fanfare by newly elected President Hassan Rouhani at the United Nations last month has disturbed long-standing U.S. allies in the Middle East such as Saudi Arabia and Israel. They are right to be worried.

So far, Iran continues to insist on its right to enrich uranium. Moreover, it refuses to close an enrichment facility under control of the Iranian Revolutionary Guard.

If talks are to advance, the United States and its co-negotiators from the European Union, Russia and China will have to make concessions leaving Iran with the capability to make nuclear weapons even if its immediate ambitions are blunted.

It makes you wonder why some Western diplomats were expressing "cautious optimism" following last week's closed meeting in Geneva.

Since 2006 the United Nations has demanded that Iran stop enriching uranium, a process that produces material for nuclear weapons. Meanwhile, Iran has built up a large-scale uranium-enrichment industry.

It has manufactured a large amount of low-enriched uranium suitable to fuel a power-generating nuclear reactor, and has started accumulating medium-enriched fuel for a research reactor that makes medical isotopes used to fight cancer.

And it can make high-enriched uranium used in nuclear weapons if it so chooses.

Up until now Washington and its allies, negotiating for the U.N., have demanded that Iran give up weapons-grade uranium as a first step toward lifting sanctions. ...

Iran has timed its push to get sanctions lifted with a shrewd eye on President Obama's need for a foreign policy "success." No wonder the Saudis are reported to view the administration as having gone soft. No wonder that the Israeli cabinet issued a statement before the Geneva meeting warning about the dangers of a premature end to sanctions if it allows Iran to continue taking steps leading to nuclear weapons.

Lord Nelson did his duty and Britain was saved

"When Napoleon lay at Boulogne for a year with his flat-bottom boats and his Grande Army, he was told, 'There are bitter weeds in England.'"

– Winston Churchill

There was certainly one bitter weed, and he had already sacrificed one arm and his sight in one eye defending his country. His name was Horatio Nelson, Vice Admiral of the British Navy, and this week in 1805 he led the most important naval victory in British history when the 27 line-of-battle ships under his command defeated a combined French and Spanish fleet of 33 "flat-bottomed" ships under the command of French Admiral Pierre Villeneuve at the Battle of Trafalgar.

Bruce Kauffmann
History Lesson

In ensuring a British victory, Nelson not only prevented France's Emperor Napoleon from invading Britain with his 130,000-man "Grande Army," Nelson also ensured a "Pax Brittanica," in which British naval supremacy, which would last for the next 100 years, gave Europe, and much of the British Empire, a measure of stability not previously enjoyed.

To be sure, Nelson did not defeat Napoleon – that would take another battle a decade later (at Waterloo in the Netherlands) – but he did prevent Napoleon from becoming master of Europe. Napoleon had long considered Britain the chief obstacle to his controlling the European continent, and had thought that if he could command the English Channel just long enough to send an invasion fleet from Boulogne to the English coast, his Grande Army would easily destroy any defending army the British could muster. The only thing in his way was the British Navy, which for years had been watching Napoleon's every move and had engaged in a quasi-blockade of every port in Europe in which French warships were docked.

Finally, frustrated and impatient, Napoleon ordered Villeneuve, whose ships were off Spain's coast at Cadiz, to "break out" of the blockade and sail for England, but near Cape Trafalgar off the Spanish coast Nelson was waiting, and his battle instructions to his crew were very simple. "England expects that every man will do his duty."

Four hours of cannon, musket fire and bloody hand-to-hand combat later, their duty was done and the battle won. Eighteen badly damaged French and Spanish ships had surrendered, a nineteenth had been destroyed, and Villeneuve had been captured. And Nelson was dead. Just before the battle ended he was mortally wounded by a French sniper, but he died knowing he had been victorious. His last words were, "Thank God I have done my duty."

To this day Nelson is considered the greatest naval officer in British history, and in 1849 a monument to him, the Nelson Column, was erected in the heart of London – at a place now called Trafalgar Square.

No end in sight to America's fiscal excess

In ending the rancorous impasse that led to the shutdown of much of the federal government, Democrats and Republicans agreed they need to sit down together and address the budget to avoid a repeat of the debacle next year. And they probably will reach agreement – to do as little as possible.

Steve Chapman

That's not because the budget picture is bright or suffers from problems that will subside on their own. On the contrary, the fiscal forecast is straight out of a Stephen King novel: scary, with every assurance it will grow ever more terrifying.

The federal debt is now equal to 73 percent of gross domestic product – the highest since just after World War II. The only good news is that the annual deficit has been declining. But it's a brief respite. After 2015, the Congressional Budget Office figures, it will resume its upward trajectory.

Given current trends and policies, CBO said, "By 2038, the deficit would be 6.5 percent of GDP, larger than in any year between 1947 and 2008, and federal debt held by the public would reach 100 percent of GDP, more than in any year except 1945 and 1946. With such large deficits, federal debt would be growing faster than GDP, a path that would ultimately be unsustainable."

At some point, the two parties may have to take painful steps to stave off disaster. But that point is way off in the future. For now, we can expect them to perpetuate the status quo as long as they can.

Balancing the budget is never easy for our leaders, which is why the federal government almost always runs a deficit. But a glimmer of hope can be found in the four-year string of surpluses from 1998 through 2001. Maybe the solutions employed then could be revived.

But a closer look at that experience offers cause for even greater gloom. The balancing of the budget came about through events and circumstances that bear no resemblance to the present.

Back then, says fiscal analyst Chris Edwards of the libertarian Cato Institute, "politicians in both parties were afraid of deficits" – worried they would bring on high interest rates, rising inflation and economic stagnation. Since then, it's become apparent that most economic indicators do not rise or fall on the tide of red ink – not in the short run, anyway.

The Clinton administration also benefited from the "peace dividend" generated by the end of the Cold War. The collapse of the Soviet Union allowed us to cut defense spending to the lowest level in decades.

In the 1990s, a booming economy (and stock market) meant more people were paying taxes and fewer were collecting benefits. The baby boom generation was in its prime working years.

Today, however, the economy is in a never-ending slump. Costs for social programs, such as food stamps and Medicaid, have risen sharply, while tax receipts have not. Many boomers have reached their golden years and started to collect from Social Security and Medicare on an unprecedented scale.

So the budgetary environment is much tougher than it was then. Meanwhile, politicians have gotten more comfortable with fiscal laxity. Spending ballooned under George W. Bush and again under Barack Obama.

"Few members of either party want to cut spending," laments Edwards, who notes that among the Republican attacks on Obama is that his health care plan would cut Medicare, whose growth happens to be "the biggest single problem in the federal budget."

Today, Democrats won't tolerate new cuts in Social Security and Medicare unless Republicans agree to boost revenue. Republicans think no spending cut can justify a tax increase. Each party kindly lets the other off the hook.

Last week, The New York Times reported House and Senate budget conferees "largely agreed at a closed-door breakfast on Thursday that a deal involving significant new tax revenues and large-scale changes to Medicare, Medicaid and Social Security, whose growth in an aging population is driving long-term projections of growing debt, is not going to happen."

Nor is it a sure thing that Congress will stick with the automatic cuts mandated by the 2011 budget deal. Democrats complain they shortchange vital domestic programs, while Republicans fear they weaken the military. It's not hard to imagine a solution that would satisfy both parties.

Avoiding fiscal responsibility would mean continuing to run up huge debts and court economic ruin. But that's never stopped them before.

Germany, France want U.S. to agree to curb spying

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press

BRUSSELS — Indignant at reports of U.S. electronic espionage overseas, the leaders of Germany and France said Friday they will insist the Obama administration agree by year's end to limits that could put an end to alleged American eavesdropping on foreign leaders, businesses and innocent citizens.

German spy chiefs will travel to Washington shortly to talk with U.S. officials about the spying allegations that have so angered European leaders, including whether Chancellor Angela Merkel's own cellphone was monitored by the National Security Agency.

Merkel and French President Francois Hollande, at the final day of a European Union summit in Brussels, did not offer many specifics on what they want President Barack Obama and his intelligence chiefs to agree to.

A former French counter-intelligence agent, however, told The Associated Press the European allies will likely demand the Americans sign off on a "code of good conduct" for intelligence-gathering, and could use the espionage dispute as leverage against the United States in upcoming trade talks.

"I think France and Germany would want guidelines," said Claude Moniquet, who now directs the Brussels-based European Strategic and Intelligence Center. But he was dubious there would be much change in intelligence agencies' real-world behavior.

"Everyone swears on the Bible," Moniquet said. "And after that it's business as usual."

This week alone, there have been headlines in the European press about the U.S. scooping up millions of French telephone records and perhaps listening in on Merkel's calls. A British newspaper said it obtained a confidential memo indicating that the personal communications of up to 35 foreign leaders may have been subject to U.S snooping in 2006.

On Friday, Spanish Prime Minister Mariano Rajoy said in Brussels that he had instructed his foreign minister to summon the U.S. ambassador in Spain to obtain information on news reports that Spain has been a target of U.S. spying, but insisted that his government was unaware of any cases.

In a front-page story, Spain's leading newspaper El Pais cited unidentified sources that saw documents obtained by former NSA contractor Edward Snowden as saying they showed the agency had tracked phone calls, text messages and emails of millions of Spaniards, and spied on members of the Spanish government and other politicians.

Hollande, the French president, said his country and Germany decided to seek a "framework of cooperation with the United States so that the surveillance practices end. We fixed a deadline by the end of the year."

"They (the Americans) told us it was in the past and now there's a will to organize things differently," Hollande told a post-summit gathering of reporters. "Fine, let's do it."

France's leader seemed to object especially to any use of state intelligence assets to spy on innocent people or to promote a nation's trade goals or companies.

"Protection of virtual life is not just the protection of leaders, who have cellphones just like everyone else. It's the protection of all citizens," Hollande said. "The protection of personal information should be guaranteed in Europe and demanded of the intelligence services."

Economic spying can affect markets, prices and mergers and acquisitions as well as affairs of state, Hollande said. "It's there that the surveillance can have the most consequences. ... On innovation and research, there's also surveillance. That's why the major French enterprises, include tech companies, are in a program to give them protection."

Merkel told a separate news conference that "what we seek is a basis for the cooperation of our (intelligence) services, which we all need and from which we all have gotten very much information ... that is transparent and clear and that lives up to the character of a relationship of allies."

The chancellor said intelligence chiefs from her country and France would hold separate one-on-one discussions with the Americans, but pool information.

As a first step, the heads of Germany's foreign and domestic intelligence agencies will participate in talks with the White House and the NSA, said German government spokesman Georg Streiter.

He did not give a specific date for the trip to Washington, saying it was being arranged on "relatively short notice."

Bison win Red Arrow

New Buffalo upsets Lake Michigan Catholic

By AL AREND
H-P Sports Correspondent

ST. JOSEPH — New Buffalo's football team pulled off a major upset Friday night capturing the school's first conference football title in 23 years by shocking Lake Michigan Catholic 16-0 at Dickinson Stadium.

New Buffalo 16 Catholic 0

The 1990 Bison squad was a perfect 9-0 during the regular season in winning the Red Arrow crown.

But this Bison team ended up 4-5 overall and 3-0 in the league by knocking off the playoff-bound Lakers (2-1, 7-2).

New Buffalo's line simply dominated play on both sides of the ball as the Lakers never crossed midfield in the first half and never penetrated the Bison 30-yard line in the last half.

"That was a huge win," said a delighted first-year New Buffalo coach Matt Johnson, who split the back of his pants during the Bison on-field celebration after the victory. "We had a great middle of the season, but we've struggled the last couple of weeks. Our hearts just weren't in it.

"We've had our ups and downs, but I told the kids that regardless of what has happened during the season that we were still in a position to win a conference championship," explained Johnson. "Our seniors took it to heart. They led the rest of the team and our younger kids stepped up and followed their lead. Our coaches had a great game plan."

"Their (New Buffalo's) kids up front did a nice job," noted Catholic coach Steve Graziano. "But it was our mistakes that hurt us, too."

Catholic's first miscue was a costly illegal formation penalty late in the first quarter that negated a 71-yard TD scamper by Michael Koenig.

New Buffalo's John Tarnowski the ripped off two TD runs of 17 and 16 yards in the second quarter giving the Bison a 13-0 halftime lead.

The first TD followed his own interception on the Laker 25. The second followed a failed fourth-and-6 play at midfield by Catholic that gave New Buffalo the ball. Four plays later, Tarnowski rumbled in from 16 yards out with 12 seconds left in the half.

Liam Armstrong added a 27-yard field goal with 2:08 remaining in the game, after another desperation failed fourth down attempt by the Lakers.

Watervliet completes undefeated regular season, wins SAC South

By BEN SANDERS

LAWTON — Running a spread offense doesn't mean a football team can't be physical.

Watervliet 54 Lawton 20

Watervliet showed that in Friday night's 54-20 victory over Lawton.

The Division 6 ninth-ranked Panthers ran 54 times for 357 yards, dominating the line of scrimmage on both sides of the ball to clinch an undefeated regular season and the Southwestern Athletic Conference South Division championship.

"From day one, we talked about being a very physical team," Watervliet coach Jeremy Andrews said. "All that bunk about spread can't run the ball, can't be physical, can't get the tough yards... not us. We're going to be tough up front and our offensive line embodies that. They just get after it."

Watervliet (4-0 SAC South, 9-0) avenged a loss to Lawton (3-1, 8-1) in the final regular season game of 2012 that gave the Division 7 eighth-ranked Blue Devils the division title.

"It's great to avenge what they did last year, take (the title) back where it belongs," said Watervliet wide receiver and defensive back Deven Schultz, a four-year varsity player. "It's amazing. It's what every year we work for, offseason and everything. This is what we want to be, 9-0."

Quarterback Luke Traver led the Watervliet rushing attack, carrying 30 times for 183 yards and four touchdowns. Running back Garrison Muth added 134 yards on 13 attempts.

"They run a very disciplined, tough spread offense," Lawton co-coach Kyle Karsen said. "Tonight they came out a little more physical up front, and that was the biggest thing I noticed was that they were getting off the ball a little bit quicker. Even when we were making tackles it was a couple yards downfield."

Bridgman postseason bound for second straight season

By AUSTIN BORNHEIM
HP Sports Writer

BRIDGMAN — Behind strong performances from quarterback Daniel Koziel and receiver Cooper Mojsiejenko, Bridgman solidified its spot in this season's playoffs.

Bridgman 54 Tri-unity 12

Koziel threw for 158 yards and four touchdowns, and Mojsiejenko hauled in five passes for 113 yards in the Bees' 54-12 drubbing of Wyoming Tri-unity Christian.

"This was a game we felt very good going into," Bridgman coach Erik Haskins said. "I felt like we were able to execute very well and Mojsiejenko had a ton of receiving yards and my quarterback threw for touchdowns. It was a good night."

The win puts Bridgman (6-3) in the postseason for the second straight year.

"It just shows how much hard work all of us, the coaches, everyone around the program have put in," Koziel said. "I'm so proud to be a part of this group."

In brief

Kenny Perry leads AT&T Championship

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Kenny Perry birdied five of the first six holes and finished with a 7-under 65 to take the first-round lead Friday in the Champions Tour's AT&T Championship.

The Charles Schwab Cup leader birdied the first three holes, dropped a stroke on the par-3 fourth, then birdied the next two holes. He added birdies on Nos. 12, 14 and 15.

Perry won the Senior Players Championship and U.S. Senior Open in consecutive tour starts this summer.

He entered the regular-season finale 494 points ahead of second-place Bernhard Langer in the race for a $1 million annuity.

Tom Pernice Jr. was a stroke back after a 66, and Langer and Anders Forsbrand followed at 67.

Bradley playing well at CIMB Classic

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Keegan Bradley is playing so well at the CIMB Classic that not even his beloved Boston Red Sox and the World Series can distract him.

Teeing off on Friday at Kuala Lumpur Golf and Country Club while the Red Sox were playing St. Louis in Game 2 of the World Series in Boston, Bradley had seven birdies — five in a six-hole stretch on his back nine — and shot a 6-under 66 to open a four-stroke lead at 13-under 131.

Ryan Moore was second, following his opening 63 with a 72.

Kiradech Aphibarnrat and Chris Stroud shot 69 to reach 8 under.

Phil Mickelson was 3 under after a 70.

The tournament is an official PGA Tour event for the first time.

Guthrie out front at BMW Masters

SHANGHAI (AP) — Luke Guthrie handled another day of strong wind and kept his distance in the BMW Masters with a 1-under 71, giving the American a four-shot lead going into the weekend of his first tournament in Asia.

Guthrie never let anyone get closer than two shots at Lake Malaren, and he started to pull away with a 20-foot birdie that broke three ways on the 17th. But he misjudged the speed of the 18th green on a long chip and narrowly missed a 10-foot par putt on the final hole.

That put him at 8-under 136, four shots clear of six players in the European Tour event.

The Bees jumped on Triunity early, scoring two touchdowns before the halfway mark of the first quarter.

Koziel would add two more touchdown passes in the opening quarter to give Bridgman a commanding 28-0 lead 12 minutes into the game.

"We were able to come out early and jump on them, which is key in important games," Koziel said.

After Bridgman's special teams recorded a safety on a blocked punt, the Bees were back to work in the second quarter.

On the first play from scrimmage following Triunity's kickoff, Koziel found Tyle Gnodtke on a screen pass that the he took 73 yards for a touchdown. It was the second time Koziel had found the senior receiver for a score.

"It's pretty easy for me to have a good night when you have big receivers like I have to throw to," Koziel said. "Our guys (Mojsiejenko and Gnodtke) made some great catches too."

The Bees added 10 more points in the final 38 seconds of the half — a Jacob Pappa 1-yard run and Mojsiejenko kick as the clock expired — to go into the half up 47-0.

Tri-unity (1-8) scored two touchdowns in the third quarter to cut the deficit to 35, but Bridgman's Michael Jones busted a 26-yard run to push the Bees' lead back to 42.

"We had some letdowns tonight, but you're going to have letdowns sometimes. We also got a lot of younger guys some action, which is good to help in the future," Haskins said.

A leg injury kept Traver from his usual kicking duties, and the Panthers squibbed their kickoffs and attempted two-point conversions on seven on their touchdowns. But on offense, Traver certainly looked healthy.

"Once the game started going and the adrenaline started pumping, it felt fine," Traver said.

Traver passed for just 69 yards and one touchdown, a 24-yarder to Jordan Pitre, but his arm was hardly needed.

"If the ground's working, why throw it?" Schultz said. "Just keep pounding them."

Lawton scored on the game's first play from scrimmage, a 59-yard touchdown pass from George Gilley to Brandon Turner.

After overcoming a 14-point halftime deficit to Decatur the previous week, Watervliet wasn't fazed.

"Going back to last week, being down 14 at halftime, there was no panic there," Andrews said. "We knew if we could come back down 14 at the half, 7-0 in the first minute wasn't the end of the world."

Watervliet answered with a 79-yard touchdown drive that ended with a 1-yard scoring plunge from Traver.

The Panthers continued to dominate on the ground throughout the first half, scoring on four of their five offensive possessions.

Their one mistake was a Traver pass that was picked off by Lawton's Jarod Wimes, setting up a 6-yard touchdown pass from Gilley to Jarad Terry that closed the score to 20-14.

Watervliet answered with an 80-yard scoring drive, with Traver taking the ball in from 18 yards out for the touchdown.

On Lawton's next possession, Gilley was intercepted by R.J. Rudel, who returned the ball 46 yards for a touchdown to make it 34-14.

"I don't know where the quarterback was throwing it," Rudel said. "There was nobody in the area, and I didn't really expect it coming. but I got it and took it to the house. That was probably the happiest moment I've had all year."

Lawton was plagued by turnovers throughout the game, throwing three interceptions and losing a fumble. Traver and Schultz each picked off passes for Watervliet.

"The majority of them came off of pressure, from their (defensive) line getting some push up front," Karsen said. "Our quarterback kind of getting hit as he throws or having to rush his throws... that was probably the biggest cause of it."

A pair of field goals by Lawton's Brenden Wimes closed the margin to 34-20 after three quarters. Wimes also led Lawton in receiving with six catches for 118 yards.

But Watervliet dominated the fourth quarter. Weston DeHaven had a great quarter for the Panthers, scoring two rushing touchdowns and setting up another by forcing a fumble on a sack.

Tyler Schwerdt recovered at the Lawton 10, leading to Traver's fourth touchdown run.

Though Watervliet was 8-1 in the regular season three of the past four years, the unbeaten season was the Panthers' first under Andrews.

"It feels really good," Andrews said. "We got here at 8-0 last year and weren't able to close the deal, so it meant a lot... 9-0 seasons don't come every year. It's a special thing."

Watervliet's Deven Schultz slips past Lawton's Jarod Wimes during the first half of Friday's game.

New Buffalo's Johnson praised the play of senior linebacker Trae Gibbs and two-way senior lineman Richard Nekvasil.

"Gibbs and Nekvasil, those two kids always work hard," said Johnson. "They led and the rest of the team followed."

For Catholic, which has lost two of its last three games, coach Graziano stated:

"It's how we respond to this now. This was a tough loss. We have to fix it by next week. I don't know what to tell you. We've never really recovered from our loss to Brandywine, but I'm going to have to figure it out. That's my job."

New Buffalo outgained Catholic 203 to 185 net yards, but threw for 57 yards including two key pass completions by quarterback John Paul Perez in the TD drive just before halftime. The Lakers completed just one pass for four yards.

Strength-training exercise can help slow bone loss

Dear Doctor K: I've heard that weight-bearing exercises are a good way to prevent osteoporosis. Can you describe a few?

Dear Reader: Use it or lose it: That message applies to most parts of our body. We see it most clearly with the muscles. If we don't use them, they wither. But if we regularly challenge them, they bulk up.

The same is true with bones. Most of our bones bear our weight, except when we're lying down. That's what they "want" to do. If we don't give them enough time each day to do that, they tend to get thin.

This is a particular problem if a person also has a genetic tendency to develop osteoporosis. Inactivity speeds the thinning of the bones that occurs in osteoporosis. This makes them more susceptible to fractures.

Weight-bearing (or strength-training) exercise is any activity that puts stress on bones. Walking and climbing stairs are examples. Weight-bearing exercises can help to slow bone loss and stimulate new bone growth.

A complete strength-training workout involves eight to 12 exercises. Together, they exercise all your major muscle groups.

Dr. Anthony Komaroff

Below, I'll describe three strength-training exercises. They are designed for older adults and people who are new to strength training.

Do strength-training exercises two or three times a week. Allow at least 48 hours between workouts. Try to do each exercise eight to 12 times, or repetitions ("reps"). These repetitions make up one set. Do two to four sets of each exercise. Rest for 30 to 60 seconds between sets.

To do these exercises, you'll need a sturdy chair, athletic shoes, an exercise mat and weights. (You should be able to do no more than eight to 12 reps of each exercise with the weights you choose.)

▶ Bridge: Lie on your back with your knees bent and your feet flat on the floor. Put your hands next to your hips with palms flat on the floor. Keep your back straight as you lift your buttocks as high as you can off the floor. Pause. Lower your buttocks without touching the floor, then lift again.

▶ Standing calf raise: Stand with your feet flat on the floor. Hold on to the back of your chair for balance. Raise yourself up on the balls of your feet, as high as possible. Hold briefly, then lower.

▶ Overhead press: Stand with your feet slightly apart. Hold a dumbbell in each hand on either side of your shoulders, at shoulder height, with your palms facing forward. Slowly lift the weights straight up until your arms are fully extended. Pause. Slowly lower the dumbbells to shoulder level.

I've put additional strength-training exercises, as well as illustrations of the exercises I've described above, on my website, AskDoctorK.com. You don't need to go to a gym; a small investment in buying exercise mats and weights allows you to do all the exercises at home.

Son's long hair brings out worst in mom's abusive clan

Dear Abby: I have a 10-year-old son. "Zack's" a great kid, creative, funny and athletic. He has decided to grow his hair long. My husband and I figure it's not illegal or immoral, so why fight it?

My family does not share our opinion. My mom and sister are cruel in their opposition to Zack growing his hair. They tell him he looks like a girl and call him names. There have been bribes, bullying and instances of utter insanity on their part, trying to make him cut it.

My sister's son has been physically and verbally cruel to Zack, and she thinks it's funny. She's repeating a pattern from when we were children of being the "toughest" – if you can't handle the abuse, you're a "baby."

I need to know how to stand up to these family members for my son. It's a struggle for me to speak to them face-to-face, and they have called me a coward for sending email messages. My mother lives alone and sometimes has suicidal thoughts. Zack is stressed because he loves his grandma, but can't deal with her harassment. Can you help? – Guilt-Ridden and Stressed in Ontario, Canada

Dear Guilt-Ridden And Stressed: I'll try. Somehow, for your son's sake, you must find the courage to tell your mother and your sister to their faces that if they don't knock it off immediately, they'll be seeing a lot less of you and Zack.

The dynamics in your family are unhealthy – but you are an adult now and no longer have to tolerate it. Because Zack is athletic, enroll him in self-defense classes and make sure he knows he does not have to tolerate physical abuse from anyone and that includes his cousin.

Jeanne Phillips
Dear Abby

As to "Grandma," your son's emotional health must take precedence over hers. I seriously doubt she'll kill herself if she doesn't have your son to make miserable, so don't feel guilty about it.

Dear Abby: I was on a bus yesterday and a woman seated near me complained about how long the trip was taking for so long and so loudly that I ended up "catching" her negative energy. Because I couldn't find a nice way to shut her up, I finally put on earphones and turned on my music.

When there is a toxic person in a public place, what is the best way to get them to stop spewing their hateful sewage onto everyone else? – Allison in Brooklyn

Dear Allison: The most obvious way would be to put physical distance between you and the person, if that's possible. If it isn't, then the way you handled it was appropriate. In the interest of safety, I would not recommend confronting a possibly emotionally disturbed individual.

Dear Abby: My wife and I are retired and financially secure. Our three adult children shower us with costly gifts on Christmas, birthdays, and Mother's Day and Father's Day. Most of them end up on our closet shelves.

How can we tell them that what we would really prefer is just a kind, handwritten (not store-bought) note with possibly a recent picture of them or our grandchildren enclosed? – Dad Who Has It All

Dear Dad: Why not say it the same way you expressed it to me? You are financially secure. Your closets are filled. You don't have room for any more "things," and this is the kind of gift you would prefer. If they disregard your wishes and give you more gifts you can't use, you can always donate them to a needy family.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

Bob Uecker, who was given the nickname Mr. Baseball by Johnny Carson, said, "When I came up to bat with three men on and two outs in the ninth, I looked in the other team's dugout and they were already in street clothes."

In today's deal, South must find a ninth trick in three no-trump. If he makes the wrong play, he will strike out. What should he do after West leads the diamond queen?

North hoped to find a 4-4 major-suit fit, but when it didn't happen, he jumped to three no-trump.

South starts with eight top tricks: one spade, two diamonds and five clubs. He has two 50-50 shots for his ninth trick: West might have the spade king, or East might hold the heart ace. Which should he try?

The odds are equal, but declarer should play a heart to his king first. Why?

First, suppose the worst happens: West takes the king with his ace and returns a heart, the defenders taking four tricks in the suit. South still has the spade finesse on the back burner.

Second, an expert sitting West with, say, ace-third, might duck, thinking that declarer has K-Q-10 and wanting to give him a guess on the second round of the suit.

If declarer tries the spade finesse first, he should fail with this layout. East will win with his king and return a diamond. When South plays a heart from the board, East grabs the trick and leads another diamond, giving the defenders one spade, one heart and three diamonds.

A counterculture of Jesus' people

There is a story in Luke's Gospel chapter 7 of a widow whose son had died. She and many of her friends were carrying her son out of the city on a burial brier. The name of the city was Nain. Nain was a hilltop city. So you can imagine the scene: a great crowd of people, all going together down the hill, mourning the loss of this poor woman's son. As the story goes, Jesus and his happy crowd of believers were going up the hill and coming into the city. The two crowds meet each other head on. In verse 13-15, Luke records the encounter this way: When the Lord saw her, He had compassion on her and said to her, "Do not weep." Then He came and touched the open coffin, and those who carried him stood still. And He said, "Young man, I say to you, arise." So he who was dead sat up and began to speak. And He presented him to his mother.

Insights

Luke goes on to tell how the whole city then began to fear God and gave glory to God for this wonderful turn of events from sorrow into joy.

When I thought upon this story I began to see how most of the world is like the widow of Nain. They are hopeless unless there is an encounter with Jesus and his crowd. They are without God and without hope and have nothing else that they can do but "go downhill to the grave." Maybe some of the people we meet each day are not exactly in the same situation as the widow of Nain, but in their life, they are sorrowful and hopeless about issues of importance to them. Some may be suffering chronic illnesses, financial stress and a host of other things beyond their ability to resolve. Without an intervention of God's help, there is just no hope. They seem to be going "downhill."

Thank God for the church: Jesus and his crowd! Jesus' Church is the crowd of happy followers, going up the hill toward the city. When we encounter those who are hopeless, we have compassion for them. Why? Because that is what Jesus did and we are followers of his example. We offer the first words of hope: "Weep not; Jesus cares for you." He will not just walk by, but instead touch the dead dreams and important needs in your life. Jesus answers the prayers of hurting people.

Recently there was a man who was not a member of our church who came in a wheelchair. He had been displaced from his home. Several people began to pray for him and we felt a special compassion for him. One person told him they sensed that God was going to provide an even better place for him to live. Then another took hold of him and pulling up from the wheelchair said to him, "Jesus wants to heal you so you can walk." The man said, "I am afraid," and the man doing the praying said, "So am I." As he sat back down in the wheelchair we were all wondering what God would do; we were sure from the story of the widow of Nain that Jesus wanted to change sorrow into joy, but we did not see any change that night.

Within a few days I received a call from him: "Pastor, I am walking with a cane; not perfect yet, but I am waking. And I have a nice place to live, just like I was told."

Jesus and his crowd can be a counterculture against the culture of sorrow and death: we just need to have compassion for hurting people and ask Jesus, "What do you want to do here?" He loves to change sorrows into joy.

Academy may drop religious reference from oath

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — The U.S. Air Force Academy may drop a religious reference from an oath cadets take to swear allegiance to the school's honor code after a religious freedom group said it's a litmus test for honesty.

The Military Religious Freedom Foundation protested the "so help me God" phrase that was added to the end of an oath that has cadets swearing they won't lie, cheat, steal or tolerate those who do.

The religious freedom foundation says tying the honor code to a religious test violates the U.S. Constitution.

"To tie the honor code to a religious test violates the no-establishment clause of the Constitution," said Mikey Weinstein, founder of the foundation and a frequent academy critic.

The academy says it is considering several options, including dumping the entire honor oath. Another possibility is to make the reference optional.

"We need to be respectful of all people of faith and all people of no faith," said academy spokesman David Cannon. "Our goal is to do the right thing for the Air Force Academy."

HOROSCOPE

By BERNICE BEDE OSOL

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 26

You won't have much time to relax in the coming year. Get involved in anything that will help you excel. Reaching your goals should be your top priority. Gain confidence, pick up new skills and masterfully take on a new and exciting challenge.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It's a good day to broaden your interests and perfect your talents. Make a lifestyle choice that is unusual. A healthy conscience will lead you to a better place mentally, physically and emotionally.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You should do whatever it takes to improve your surroundings, make your place more user-friendly and less expensive. The steps you take today will have a big effect down the line.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Don't be shy; stand up and be heard. Take on a challenge and prove that you have what it takes to be victorious. A partnership will open doors and help close deals.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You'll face a somewhat steep learning curve today. Don't be afraid to challenge your abilities. Open your mind and hone skills that will contribute to your happiness.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't waste time. Size up your situation and do whatever it takes to get what you want. Discuss your plans with people you feel have something to offer. An increase to your income will happen soon.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Observe what is going on around you today. Make adjustments quietly and strategically. You will have more options if you leave yourself room to maneuver. Keep your choices simple and affordable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Refuse to let an emotional incident stand between you and your goal. Speak up, offer suggestions and make decisions that give you the freedom to choose what works best for you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Work with whatever you are given today. You may have to turn a negative into a positive. Look for an opening that allows you to reach your destination with the least amount of resistance and expense.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Head down the path that offers unusual and unfamiliar sights. You will learn much and make many new discoveries and friends if you take the road less traveled.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Face any disruption to your day with courage and action. A change will do you good and give you time to think. You should head in the direction that pleases you best.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) What you do for others will not go unnoticed. Strive to make a difference and you will be rewarded. Improving your community will raise your profile.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Look for a peaceful way to bypass opposition. Focus on your talent and displaying your expertise. Romance could be in the making.
